Respondent and Third-Party Complainant COSCO Shipping Lines Co., Ltd., (“COSCO”), by its undersigned attorneys, respectfully submits this response to the motion (“Motion”) of Samsung SDSAP Global SCL Asia Pacific PTE LTD (“SDSAP”), to dismiss COSCO’s Third-Party Complaint (“TPC”).¹

INTRODUCTION

The essence of COSCO’s Third-Party Complaint, along with its Counterclaim, is about a group of affiliated companies involved in international commerce that decided to improve the bottom line by obtaining transportation rates and charges below those otherwise available via a scheme of deception and concealment. The group consisted of SDSAP and three affiliates—Samsung Electronics Company, Ltd (“SEC”), Samsung Electronics Logitech Company (“Logitech”), and Samsung Electronics America, Inc. (“SEA”) (collectively, the “Samsung entities”). Third-Party Respondent SDSAP was an integral part of the group, and an integral part of the group’s scheme to obtain rates and charges – promising in writing to incur certain charges in exchange for lower rates and charges, even though the Samsung entities did not plan to honor that obligation. In this respect, the case here is much like Tropical Shipping & Construction Co., Ltd. v. Valley Wide Produce, Inc., FMC Dkt. No. 93-05, 1993 WL 285897 (ALJ Default Judgment, July 20, 1993), where the ALJ concluded that the shipper violated 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a)(1) by signing a credit agreement in order to obtain better terms and conditions, then dishonoring its agreement.

¹ SDS says its exact name is “Samsung SDS Asia Pacific Ptd Ltd.” Motion at 1. The name used in the TPC is that under which SDS signed the Service Contracts, which were filed with the FMC. TPC ¶17.

BACKGROUND

I. STATEMENT OF FACTS²

For the period 2021 and 2022, COSCO and SDSAP entered into two separate service contracts for transportation between Asia and the United States—No. GKU21006 (for 2021) and No. GKU22006 (for 2022) (the “Service Contracts”). TPC ¶ 16. Each of the Service Contracts was duly filed with the Federal Maritime Commission (“FMC” or “Commission”), and each provided for the application of United States law, including the Shipping Act. TPC ¶¶ 15, 17. The Service Contracts were binding not just on SDSAP, as signatory, but also on its named affiliates, including the other Samsung entities. Each of these affiliates, like SDSAP, played an intimate role in the negotiation and implementation of the Service Contracts. 46 U.S.C. § 40502(b), 46 C.F.R. § 530.8(a)(1) (every service contract must be filed with the FMC); 46 C.F.R. § 502.226 (presiding officer may take judicial notice of matters within the technical expertise of the FMC).

Each of the Service Contracts originated as a Request for Quotation (“RFQ”) seeking bids for ocean transportation to be provided to the Samsung entities. Such RFQs were sent not just to COSCO, but also to multiple other ocean common carriers. TPC ¶ 9.

The RFQs to which COSCO responded, and the Service Contracts into which COSCO and SDSAP entered, required two types of ocean transportation—port-to-port or container yard-to-container yard (“CY-CY”) and container yard-to-door (“CY-Door” or “store door”) transportation. TPC ¶¶ 22-23. Under CY-CY transportation, the ocean common carrier’s obligation of common carriage ends for a particular container once that container is discharged from the vessel (in this case in the United States) and made available for pickup by the consignee. Under CY-Door, the ocean common carrier's obligation extends past discharge at the port and extends until delivery to an address designated by the consignee.

CY-Door delivery on a "through" bill of lading can be structured in two ways. First, the ocean common carrier itself chooses and hires the trucking company and executes a contract with the trucker, known colloquially as a "house" trucker. The ocean carrier has operational control over the trucker and is normally responsible for any delays or problems caused by the trucker, unless delays or problems are due to the actions of the consignee and/or its agents. TPC ¶ 28. In the second form of store door delivery, known as Customer-Nominated Trucker ("CNT"), the consignee, rather than the ocean carrier, selects the trucker to perform inland delivery and return the container. The consignee chooses the trucker and controls its activities (e.g., when the trucker comes to pick up or return containers). The contract is between the trucker and the consignee, not between the trucker and the ocean common carrier. The ocean carrier's role is only to execute the contract as agent for the consignee and to pay the fixed and normal costs of inland transportation provided by the CNT.

As detailed below, the Service Contracts followed the second form of store door delivery, at the specific demand of the Samsung entities. Id. ¶ 30. The Service Contracts each contained provisions (including terms incorporated from COSCO's governing tariff) under which the Samsung entities had the authority to select and control the truckers used to deliver the containers to the consignee (or at its designated address (including direct delivery to SEA's and the Samsung entities' customers)). Id. ¶¶ 47-48. The provisions protecting COSCO from responsibility for actions of the consignee or its agent CNT were expressly required by COSCO as part of the consideration for the below-market rates and other favorable terms and conditions that the Service Contracts provided to the Samsung entities. See id. ¶¶ 32, 41.

SDSAP, like the other Samsung entities, was well aware that the Service Contracts made the Samsung entities responsible for delay costs attributable to them or their CNTs. Id. ¶ 45. SDSAP signed both contracts knowing that fact without expressing any reservations or disclosing that it did not intend to abide by the express terms of the contracts, just as the shipper did in Tropical Shipping. Id. ¶¶ 45-46, 65.

As noted above, the RFQs issued by the Samsung entities for ocean transportation contracts required that responses: (i) offer both CY-CY and store door rates; and (ii) permit the Samsung entities to choose and control the CNTs that would carry cargo from the port or rail head to places designated by the Samsung entities and then return empty containers to return facilities designated by COSCO.

Because CNTs can incur substantial delay charges such as detention and demurrage, COSCO was willing to allow the Samsung entities to choose and control the CNTs, but only on conditions limiting COSCO's liability for such charges incurred by the Samsung entities and their CNTs. TPC ¶¶ 47-48. Accordingly, one of COSCO's principal conditions for agreeing to the Service Contracts and providing SEC with the lower rates offered thereby (compared to tariff rates or other service contracts offered by COSCO), and for allowing the Samsung entities to choose and control CNTs, was that COSCO would not be responsible for any costs associated with delays, unless COSCO itself was responsible for the delay. Id. ¶ 45. Thus, apart from paying the truckers the basic drayage rate as agent for the Samsung entities, COSCO conditioned its entry into the Service Contracts on the Samsung entities accepting responsibility for all charges connected with the actions of the Samsung entities or their CNTs not caused by COSCO, specifically including charges such as detention, demurrage, and storage at ocean terminals, rail terminals, or other facilities. Id. ¶¶ 45, 48. SEC agreed to this condition by signing the Service Contracts when it knew that it was agreeing to bear the responsibility for any delay costs not caused by COSCO. Id. ¶ 45.

In this respect, the Service Contracts that SDSAP signed on behalf of itself, and the other Samsung entities incorporated the following provision of published Tariff Rule Number 201-002-064, which stated:

[W]hen a customer nominated trucker (CNT) is used at the request of Shipper (or any other entity with an interest in the cargo) for store door delivery to a cargo receiver then, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the bill of lading issued for that shipment, the following terms and conditions shall apply: • Carrier will act as agent of Shipper for purposes of arranging the trucking, and the contract of carriage for inland transportation shall be deemed to be between the trucker and Shipper or the owner of the cargo. The CNT will be employed by the Shipper or the owner of the cargo, not Carrier, even though Carrier's rates are inclusive of door delivery. Carrier shall pay the CNT only as agent for Shipper.

TPC ¶ 41 (emphasis added).

The CNTs hired by the Samsung entities ran up significant detention and demurrage charges without any fault by COSCO. TPC ¶ 45. Because the Samsung entities refused to identify or give reasons for the specific containers the entities claim they could not pick up or deliver timely, COSCO cannot now say whether the fault in particular instances was attributable to the Samsung entities or to their CNT. TPC ¶¶ 52. But that is immaterial to resolution of SDSAP's motion to dismiss because it is indisputable the Samsung entities selected and controlled the CNT. As a result, they were responsible for both their own (or SEA's) defaults and those of their CNTs.

There was plenty of blame attributable to the Samsung entities and their CNTs. Among other things, the Samsung entities/their CNTs repeatedly accrued demurrage by allowing shipments to linger at marine terminals for periods long past the expiration of free time, rather than directing its CNT to perform timely pickup. See TPC ¶¶ 59-61. In so doing, the Samsung entities ignored multiple timely communications from COSCO notifying them of each shipment's last free day and accrued demurrage. See TPC ¶ 52. Further, the Samsung entities did not timely respond to “hastening notices” sent by COSCO, seeking instructions with respect to shipments in demurrage which continued to remain at the terminals. *Id.*³

Despite SDSAP explicitly agreeing on behalf of all the Samsung entities to be responsible for delays associated with the Samsung entities/their CNTs, the Samsung entities (including SDSAP) demanded repayment from COSCO and other ocean common carriers⁴ of charges that were properly assessed to the Samsung entities. TPC ¶ 49.

For example, the Samsung entities, via agent SEA, sent a demand letter (“Demand Letter”) to COSCO, dated September 23, 2022. Id. ¶ 51. In the Demand Letter, the Samsung entities baldly asserted that COSCO was required to refund the Samsung entities the amounts the Samsung entities purportedly paid simply because the underlying shipments moved under store door terms. Id. The Samsung entities (i) did not identify the relevant shipments (ii) did not correlate charges to specific shipments; and, (iii) did not explain why specific charges for these unidentified shipments should be mitigated or refunded. TPC ¶ 52. And the Samsung entities never explained, either in the Demand Letter or otherwise, why they (or their CNTs) failed to request additional free time or to timely challenge COSCO charges at the time invoiced by COSCO. Id. COSCO responded to the Demand Letter, noting the dearth of information. Id.

Although, as discussed below, SDSAP’s affiliate and consignee SEA eventually filed an FMC complaint (“SEA Complaint”) seeking ill-gotten gains, the SEA Complaint is at most tangential to the Third-Party Complaint against SDSAP, as SDSAP violated the Shipping Act well before the SEA Complaint was filed, and COSCO could have filed its own complaint against SDSAP even if the SEA Complaint had never been filed.

³ COSCO’s allegations are especially plausible in light of findings that Samsung entity SEA was responsible for charges incurred on shipments handled by other carriers. Samsung Electronics America, Inc. v. ZIM Integrated Shipping Services, Ltd., FMC Docket No. 22-30, Initial Decision, Slip Op. at p. 45, Finding of Fact #134 (ALJ Apr. 22, 2025). Samsung Electronics America, Inc. v. SM Line, FMC Docket No. 23-01, Initial Decision, Slip Op. at pp. 19-20, Findings of Fact #s 53-60; p 34 (FF#170); p. 35 (FF#179) (ALJ May 28, 2025).

In the TPC, COSCO alleges that the activities covered by both the TPC and the Counterclaim were committed collectively by SDSAP and other Samsung entities with SEA. See TPC ¶¶ 65-67. Although the question of exactly what steps individual Samsung entities, including SDSAP, took as part of their joint activity will be clarified through discovery, it is clear they carried out their scheme in tandem. The only reason that they are not joined as respondents in a single complaint is that SEA filed its complaint first.

The TPC, like the Counterclaim, alleges two separate unfair or unjust means by which the Samsung entities obtained or sought to obtain rates and charges lower than those otherwise applicable, neither of which depends on the SEA Complaint.⁵ Although all of the Samsung entities played a role in both schemes, SDSAP and SEA each appear to have been more specifically prominent in one of the two schemes.

First, as a way to obtain lower ocean freight rates than COSCO would otherwise have offered, the Samsung entities employed the unfair and unjust means of inducing COSCO to enter into the contracts by deceptively making it appear to COSCO that the Samsung entities,

⁵ These allegations in the TPC distinguish the TPC from the more limited original Counterclaim in SEA v. OOCL, where the Commission found the allegations insufficient to state a claim of the type made here:

OOCL's brief argues that SEA and Samsung violated section 41102(c) by engaging in deception in the making and performance of the service contracts, specifically by obtaining lower rates than OOCL would have agreed to, had it known the Samsung parties had a more constrained view of their responsibility for delays than OOCL did. See Appeal at 15-16. But the current counterclaim does not make such an allegation, and so it does not constitute a facially plausible claim here.

Samsung Electronics America, Inc. v. Orient Overseas Container Line Limited, FMC Dkt. No 24-17, *17 (July 30, 2025 Order Affirming Dismissal of Counterclaim) (emphasis added).

specifically including SDSAP, agreed to facially indisputable provisions of the Service Contracts, tariff, and bills of lading as to responsibility for detention and demurrage charges, while concealing their intention to dishonor those provisions.

Second, the Samsung entities conspired to obtain or attempt to obtain ocean transportation at less than the applicable charges – in this case mainly detention and demurrage charges – by falsely representing themselves as willing to take responsibility for such charges, then refusing to do so.

ARGUMENT

I. THE TPC SUFFICIENTLY ALLEGES SDSAP VIOLATED THE SHIPPING ACT BY KNOWINGLY EMPLOYING UNJUST AND UNFAIR MEANS TO OBTAIN LOWER RATES AND CHARGES.

As addressed in detail below, SDSAP rests its motion to dismiss largely on its assertion that claims under 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a) are subject to heightened pleading requirements, relying on Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) for fraud claims in federal courts. But the Commission has expressly held, in a rulemaking, that such heightened requirements do not apply at the FMC because such heightened standards are inconsistent with sound administrative practice. The Presiding Officer lacks authority to overrule the Commission, and any change would require a new rulemaking, which could not apply to claims filed before the effective date of the new rulemaking. Because the FMC procedural rules currently in force expressly exclude pleading requirements similar to Federal Rule 9(b), SDSAP's motion fails because COSCO's Third-Party Complaint states a plausible claim against SDSAP.

A. A Complaint Stating a Plausible Claim for Relief is not Subject to Dismissal.

Claims under 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a), whether by original complaint, counterclaim, or third-party complaint, are subject to the same standard applicable to all other complaints alleging a violation of the Shipping Act. 46 C.F.R. § 502.64(b)(4). And a fundamental principle of the Shipping Act is that the Commission is statutorily obligated to hear any claim alleging a Shipping Act violation, unless the complaint fails to state a claim.⁶

When evaluating the SDSAP motion to dismiss, the Iqbal/Twombly facial plausibility standard applies.⁷ See Samsung Elec. Am., Inc. v. Orient Overseas Container Line Limited, FMC Dkt. No. 24-17, 2025 WL 2207363, at *4 (Remand Order, July 30, 2025) (“SEA v. OOCL”). Under that standard, COSCO’s complaint against SDSAP may not be dismissed if it contains sufficient factual allegations, which must be accepted as true, to “state a claim for relief that is plausible on its face.” Twombly, 556 U.S. at 570. A claim “has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Iqbal, 550 U.S. at 663. The Commission must treat COSCO’s allegations as true, and it must “construe the factual allegations in the complaint in the light most favorable to [COSCO] and must grant [COSCO] the benefit of all inferences that can be derived from the facts as alleged in the complaint.” Cornell v. Princess Cruise Lines, Ltd., FMC Dkt No. 13-02, 33 S.R.R. 614, 620-621 (2014) (citations omitted).

On a motion to dismiss, the question is not whether the complainant is likely to prevail on its claim but only whether the claim is adequately pled. Negron v. USAA Casualty Insurance Co., No. 3:13-01020, 2014 WL 4411676 at *2 (M.D. Tenn Sept. 8, 2014); accord Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556. It is thus sufficient if the TPC’s factual allegations are enough to “raise a right to relief above the speculative level and ... nudge across the line from conceivable to plausible.” Marine Transportation Logistics, Inc. v. CMA CGM, FMC Dkt. No. 18-07, 2019 WL 5206007 at *3 (ALJ, Order Denying Motion to Dismiss, October 8, 2019). Furthermore, the “choice between two plausible inferences that may be drawn from factual allegations is not a choice to be made by the court on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion.” Anderson News, LLC v. Am. Media, Inc., 680 F.3d 162, 185 (2d Cir. 2012). A complainant must simply present “enough fact[s] to raise a reasonable expectation that discovery will reveal evidence” of the alleged violation. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556.

⁷ Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662 (2009) and Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544 (2007).

B. The Substantive Standards of 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a)

Section 41102(a) provides: “A person may not knowingly and willfully, directly or indirectly, by means of false billing, false classification, false weighing, false report of weight, false measurement, or any other unjust or unfair device or means, obtain or attempt to obtain ocean transportation for property at less than the rates or charges that would otherwise apply.” (Emphasis added). To make out a violation of 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a), a complainant need only show that: (a) a person, (b) knowingly and willfully, (c) by an unjust device or means, (d) obtained or attempted to obtain ocean transportation of property at less than the rates or charges that would be otherwise applicable. Rose International, Inc. v. Overseas Moving Network International, Ltd., FMC Dkt No. 96-05, 29 S.R.R. 119, 158 (2001).

C. The Third-Party Complaint Alleges Each 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a) Element

The TPC adequately alleges each element of a claim under Section 41102(a).

1. SDSAP is a “Person.”

SDSAP is indisputably a “person” within the meaning of 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a), which defines the term to “include corporations, companies, associations, firms, partnerships, societies, and joint stock companies, as well as individuals.” 1 U.S.C 1. As used in 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a), the words “any person,” are as broad as the words “shipper, consignor, consignee, forwarder, broker, or other person.” U.S. Lines and Gondrand Bros, 7 F.M.C. 464, 471 (FMC 1962); accord OC International Freight, Inc., Docket No. 12-01, 2014 WL 5316336 (FMC 2014); Unpaid Freight Charges, 26 S.R.R. 737, 739 (FMC 1993). COSCO alleges that SDSAP is a corporation “organized and existing under the laws of South Korea,” and that SDSAP was the Shipper Party to the Service Contract, meaning SDSAP was a shipper under the Shipping Act. TPC ¶¶ 4, 14. Accordingly, COSCO adequately alleges that SEC is a person.

2. SDSAP Acted “Knowingly and Willfully.”

Under the Shipping Act, a person acted “knowingly and willfully” “if the person had knowledge of the facts of the violation and intentionally violated or acted with reckless disregard, plain indifference, or purposeful, obstinate behavior akin to gross negligence.” Rose Int’l, Inc. v. Overseas Moving Network Int’l, Ltd., FMC Dkt. No. 96-05, 29 S.R.R. 119, 164-165 (June 1, 2001); OC International Freight, Inc. FMC Dkt. No. 12-01, 2014 WL 5316336 at *3 (July 31, 2014). “If the scheme itself is illegal, the words, ‘knowingly and willfully’ . . . mean simply that the shipper’s participation was with knowledge of the benefits which would flow from the arrangement and an intent to enjoy such benefits.” Pacific Far East Lines – Alleged Rebates to Foremost Dairies et al., 10 S.R.R. 1, 7 (FMC 1968). Here, the TPC alleges that SDSAP, along with the other Samsung entities, “knowingly and willfully” engaged in an unjust or unfair device or means to obtain or attempt to obtain ocean transportation for property at less than the rates or charges that would otherwise apply. TPC ¶ 54. And SDSAP was amply aware of the benefits that would flow from the Service Contracts and both intended to, and did, enjoy them. See, e.g., TPC ¶¶ 53-61. Those allegations must be taken as true and are sufficient to plausibly allege that SDSAP acted “knowingly and willfully.”

3. The Concerted Actions of the Samsung Entities Constitute an “Unjust Device or Means.”

All that a complainant must plead to make a plausible allegation of an unjust or unfair device or means is “some element of falsification, deception, fraud, or concealment.” Unpaid Freight Charges, 26 S.R.R. 735, 737 (FMC 1993) (emphasis added) (quoting from Pacific Far East Lines – Alleged Rebates, 11 F.M.C. 357, 364 (FMC 1968), aff’d, 410 F.2d 237 (D.C. Cir. 1969)); see also, e.g., Rana v. Franklin, FMC Dkt. No. 19-03, 2020 WL 2538465 at *23 (Initial Decision, May 12, 2020), aff’d, 2022 WL 1744905 (May 23, 2022); Waterman Steamship Corp. v. General Foundries, Inc., FMC Dkt. No. 93-15, 1994 WL 279898 at *7 (1994).

In the TPC, COSCO alleges two separate schemes by SDSAP and the other Samsung entities to obtain or attempt to obtain ocean transportation at less than the otherwise applicable rates and charges. First, and dating back to entry into the Service Contracts, SEC induced COSCO to enter into Service Contracts with lower ocean freight rates by misrepresenting its willingness to incur responsibility for delay costs caused by the Samsung entities or their CNTs. Second, the Samsung entities tried, and continued trying, to strongarm COSCO into refunding charges that were properly assessed by COSCO and that the Samsung entities knew they were legally obligated to pay.

Starting with the second scheme, a party’s attempts to pressure another party into granting a refund by means other than a complaint may constitute an unfair device or means within the meaning of 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a). In Hohenberg Brothers Co. v. FMC, 316 F.2d 381 (D.C. Cir. 1963), for example, the court, in upholding a Commission cease-and-desist order, held that an entity violated 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a) when it demanded refunds to which it was not entitled. In that case, as here, the shipper paid the charge assessed by the carrier, then demanded a partial refund. In finding an unjust device or means, the court explained its holding as follows:

In this case, Hohenberg demanded a rebate on the basis of a claim that it knew or should have known to be false. Such action is similar in nature to “false billing,” “false classification,” etc., and under well known principles of statutory interpretation may properly be considered to fall within the comprehensive final phrase “any other unjust or unfair device or means.”

Hohenberg Brothers Co., 316 F.2d at 385 (emphasis added).

COSCO’s complaint against SDSAP and the other Samsung entities is on all fours with Hohenberg. Here, COSCO alleges that the Samsung entities, including SDSAP, knew that the service contract SDSAP signed, and to which all of the Samsung entities were bound, provided that the Samsung entities, not COSCO, would be responsible for delays involving the CNT chosen and controlled by the Samsung entities, unless the specific delay was due to COSCO fault. TPC ¶ 45. Although SDSAP and the other Samsung entities knew, or should have known, that delay charges were their responsibility, they, like Hohenberg, paid some of the legally-mandated charges to COSCO, then then demanded in bad faith that COSCO refund not only delay charges properly assessed against them by COSCO but also delay charges imposed by third parties unrelated to COSCO, so neither assessed by COSCO nor paid to COSCO. TPC ¶¶ 49; 51-52.; 59.⁸

SDSAP’s contention that COSCO’s claim somehow rests on SEA’s filing a complaint against COSCO, Motion at 19, cannot stand. As SEA concedes, COSCO’s claim “made no specific allegations” about SEA’s complaint. Id. Moreover, COSCO’s claim is predicated on the Samsung entities’ effort to obtain unjustified rates by concealing their intention not to comply with the Service Contracts’ requirement that the Samsung entities would be financially responsible for all delays except those caused by COSCO, and their demands for refunds and payments —apart from

SEA's complaint. COSCO's Third-Party Complaint regarding the Samsung entities' attempt to obtain COSCO services at less than the applicable charges stands on its own footing—not SEA's complaint.

Likewise, as to the Samsung entities' first scheme—using concealment to obtain lower ocean freight rates than would otherwise be available, the crux of the deception by the Samsung entities does not turn on the filing of the SEA Complaint. Rather, COSCO's claim relies on the fact that SDSAP signed the Service Contracts it induced COSCO to enter by concealment. The Samsung entities thereby attained fraudulent access to lower rates and other favorable terms that the Service Contracts provided, which continued throughout the term of the Service Contracts. As detailed above, COSCO offered the Samsung entities rates lower than the otherwise applicable tariff rates available to the shipping public based on two main conditions – that (i) SDSAP and the other Samsung entities guarantee a certain minimum cargo volume and (ii) SDSAP and the other Samsung entities agree, as made crystal clear by the Service Contracts and incorporated public tariff, that they, not COSCO, would be legally responsible for any delay charges involving the trucker chosen and controlled by the Samsung entities, unless resulting from COSCO fault.

SDSAP, by signing the Service Contracts under those conditions, without any objection or reservation of rights, clearly acquiesced in both the minimum volume commitment and its own liability for delays attributable to actions by the Samsung entities, or their truckers. But SDSAP and the other Samsung entities knowingly failed to inform COSCO – then or during the term of the Service Contracts – that they would not abide by the assignment of liability to which they had plainly agreed. Had SDSAP or any of the other Samsung entities told COSCO of this carefully hidden reservation, COSCO would not have entered into the Service Contracts – requiring the Samsung entities to use COSCO's transportation services, if at all, only pursuant to much higher tariff rates – or would have entered into service contracts only at rates much higher than those actually granted by COSCO.

The same would have been true during the term of the service contracts. Had any of the Samsung entities announced their intention to dishonor their responsibility for delay fees, COSCO would have taken countermeasures, including possible termination of the contracts, unless SDSAP and the other Samsung entities agreed to higher rates, or employment of a dispute resolution mechanism.

The Commission has repeatedly found an unjust or unfair device or means where the shipper has induced a carrier to enter into a contract providing lower rates by concealing relevant facts. In Unpaid Freight Charges, for example, the Commission stated that it would have jurisdiction if the facts alleged “some kind of inducement or deceit” to obtain favorable treatment from a carrier. See, e.g., Tropical Shipping & Construction Co v. Valley Wide Produce, Inc., FMC Dkt No. 93-05, 1993 WL 285897 at *1 (“Tropical claims that it was induced to provide shipment on a collect basis because Valley entered into a credit agreement.... [S]uch conduct by shippers will support claims of violations of section 10(a)(1)"); Rana v. Franklin, Dkt. No. 19-03, 2020 WL 2538465 at *3 (Initial Decision, May 12, 2020) (“There is an abundance of evidence in the record that establishes fraud and deceit by the Respondent. In February 2019, the Respondent knew or reasonably suspected that her company may close soon, but failed to disclose this material information to the complainant when they entered into an agreement.”), aff’d, 2022 WL 1744905 (FMC May 25, 2022); Waterman S.S. Corp v. General Foundries, Inc., Dkt. No. 93-15, 1994 WL 279898 at *7 (FMC 1994); Shipco Transport, Inc. v. Saturn Air Cargo, FMC Dkt No. 25-07, 27

S.R.R. 437, *3-4 (Initial Decision, June 2, 1995) (admin. final) (respondent NVOCC induced complainant to extend it credit and release cargo).⁹

The Commission has recently indicated that the “unjust or unfair device or means” element requires conduct that involves fraud or concealment as to a factual matter.” SEA v. OOCL, 2025 WL 2207363 at *5. But misrepresenting one’s intentions and acceptance of an agreement as written has been deemed sufficiently factual to constitute an unfair or unjust device or means. For example, in Tropical Shipping, the Commission held a violation of 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a) occurred because an ocean carrier was induced to provide shipment on a collect basis by the shipper’s entering into a credit agreement and failure to pay the full amount due. Tropical Shipping at *1. Likewise, in several cases, violations have been found where shippers have attained benefits by presenting, then canceling checks, thereby misrepresenting their position. See, e.g., Waterman S.S. Corp, 1994 WL 279898 at *7; Shipco Transport, Inc., 27 S.R.R. 437 at *4; Global Transporte Oceanico S.A. v. Coler Ocean Independent Lines Co., FMC Dkt. No., 99-14, 1999 WL 1000658 at *2 (Initial Decision, October 1, 1999) (Respondent presented a bad check, then made partial payment and agreed in writing to pay the balance due in installments but reneged on this written agreement.).

Even if COSCO had relied on the SEA Complaint as a basis for its claim against SDSAP, which it did not, the Third-Party Complaint would still make out a plausible claim under 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a). An unjust or unfair device or means may be found where the shipper interposes non-meritorious arguments in litigation. Multiple cases have rejected the basic assertion of the SEA Complaint that ocean carriers are per se liable for all delay charges incurred in connection with store door transportation, yet the Samsung entities continue asserting that rejected theory as the basis for virtually all their claims.

⁹ Although these cases involved inducement to release cargo or carry it without prepayment, there is no logical distinction between that situation and one where a shipper induces a carrier to enter into a service contract at rates the carrier would not have agreed to absent concealment or misrepresentation by the shipper.

For example, in Capitol Transportation, Inc. v. United States, 612 F.2d 1312 (1st Cir. 1979), an unjust or unfair device or means was found based, in part, on the shipper's continuous assertion of invalid defenses. And in Bank Line Limited v. Jet Set Marine, Inc., FMC Dkt. No. 91-58, 26 S.R.R. 380 (ALJ Denial of Summary Judgment, May 8, 1992), the Presiding Officer recognized that assertion of erroneous defenses might constitute an unfair or unjust device or means but found the evidence at the summary disposition stage insufficient to render a decision. Although these cases involved non-meritorious defenses, the rationale for liability applies equally to a non-meritorious claim of violation.

4. SDSAP Sought and Obtained Rates and Charges Lower than Otherwise Applicable.

The TPC alleges two ways by which SDSAP and the other Samsung entities sought and/or obtained rates and/or charges lower than those otherwise applicable. First, as SDSAP affiliate and agent SEA has acknowledged, the Samsung entities have refused to pay COSCO over $4 million in detention charges for which the entities were legally responsible. TPC ¶¶ 45, 49, 53. Accordingly, because the Presiding Officer must take as true COSCO's well-pleaded allegation that that these amounts were properly assessed, the Samsung entities have used COSCO's equipment at $4 million lower than the applicable total charges. Under Hohenberg and other cases discussed above, the demands by Samsung entities that COSCO refund lawful charges constitute an unfair and unjust means to obtain rates lower than the otherwise applicable rate. Accordingly, facts alleged by COSCO about the Samsung entities' repeated attempts to coerce COSCO into refunding lawful charges are sufficient to state a plausible claim that SDSAP and the Samsung entities improperly attempted to obtain charges lower than those otherwise applicable.

Second, as discussed above, COSCO alleges that the Samsung entities engaged in an extended campaign of mischaracterizing and concealing relevant facts to achieve ocean freight rates that they would not have obtained from COSCO had they been forthright and forthcoming at the start and throughout the term of the contract. TPC ¶¶ 45-49. Thus, the Samsung entities both attempted to and did obtain rates below those that would have applied absent its concealment (i.e., tariff rates or higher contract rates).

II. THE PRESIDING OFFICER MAY NOT IMPOSE A HIGHER STANDARD OF PLEADING.

SDSAP's argument is almost entirely predicated on its position that claims under 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a) must be pleaded with the same degree of specificity as mandated for fraud cases in federal court by Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b). SDSAP does not cite a single case where the Commission adopted such a pleading requirement, even though the FMC has been adjudicating cases of alleged violations of § 41102(a) and its predecessors for almost 90 years. If such a pleading requirement applied, the Commission surely would have said so in its regulations or many decisions. To the contrary, SDSAP well knows that the FMC has repeatedly and steadfastly refused to apply any type of heightened pleading requirement to any cause of action under the Shipping Act.¹⁰

More importantly, the Commission has expressly and repeatedly rejected application of Fed R. Civ. P. 9(b) to claims under § 41102(a).

In 1993, the Commission proposed to amend its procedural rules to add a requirement, similar to FRCP 9(b), stating that “in all complaints alleging violations of Section 10(a)(1) of the 1984 Act [the immediate predecessor to 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a)]... the circumstances constituting such violations must be stated with particularity.” Miscellaneous Amendments to the Rules of Practice and Procedure, 26 S.R.R. 1053, 1053 (FMC 1993). After comments, however, the Commission concluded that no such new procedural rule regarding Section 10(a)(1) was warranted and that the liberal general notice pleading requirements of the Commission’s procedural rules should apply equally to all alleged violations of the Shipping Act, including 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a). Id. at 1055 (“[W]e are satisfied that a new procedural rule applicable to only to section 10(a)(1) is not needed...”) (emphasis added). This formal determination demonstrates conclusively that the rules do not contemplate heightened standards of pleading for § 41102(a) cases, and it also precludes application of 46 C.F.R. § 502.12 to import FRCP 9(b) into the Commission’s Rules unless and until the Commission itself reverses its above conclusion, because that Rule permits importation only “to the extent that they are consistent with sound administrative practice.”

The Commission’s express decision not to require a heightened pleading standard for complaints raising claims under 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a) was reaffirmed by then-Chief Administrative Law Judge Guthridge and the Commission in Mitsui O.S.K. Lines Ltd. v. Global Link Logistics, Inc., Dkt. No. 09-01, 31 S.R.R. 1369 (ALJ Order on Motions to Dismiss), aff’d in pertinent part, 32 S.R.R. 126 (FMC 2011). There, Chief Judge Guthridge flatly rejected the argument that complaints alleging violations of 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a) must be pled with greater than normal particularity or otherwise subjected to heightened pleading requirements, explaining:

Commission Rule 62 sets forth the requirements for a private complainant initiating a complaint proceeding. The Commission’s Rules do not include an equivalent to Rule 9(b) that requires a party to state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud.... Neither [of the Respondents] cite to any Commission proceeding in which the pleading standard set out in Rule 9(b) was imposed on a complainant. As noted above, pleadings in administrative proceedings are not considered to be “critically important.”

31 S.R.R. at 1384. Chief Judge Guthridge further declared, “Where the Commission has determined that an equivalent to a federal rule is not needed (i.e., it is not consistent with the Commission’s administrative practice to require stating circumstances of Section 10(a)(1) violations with particularity), I will not hold otherwise.” Id. The full Commission upheld Chief Judge Guthridge, over the dissent of Commissioner Khouri, who asserted that FRCP 9(b) should apply. 32 S.R.R. 126 (FMC 2011).

SDSAP argues that the Commission in SEA v. OOCL invited reconsideration as to the standard of pleading for section 41102(a) claims. But that is untrue, as the Commission deliberately refrained from reaching the issue, and it noted that “SEA does not dispute that the Mitsui majority rejected the argument that a higher standard should apply.” 2025 WL 2207363 at *13. Moreover, any such reassessment would need to be done by the Commission, not the Presiding Officer, and presumably by rulemaking.

As stated above, the Commission in SEA v. OOCL reaffirmed that the current rule does not allow a heightened standard of pleading. The Presiding Officer lacks authority to undo the Commission’s rulemaking or to otherwise change the existing pleading standards set out in the Commission’s Rules.¹¹

III. SDSAP’S ARGUMENTS, BASED ON THE WRONG PLEADING STANDARD, LACK MERIT.

SDSAP has put virtually all its eggs in the heightened pleadings basket. Except for one brief section, it presents its argument on the erroneous assumption that FRCP 9(b) applies, despite the Commission’s rejection of that position. As SDSAP’s arguments depend on application of heightened pleading requirements that the Commission rejected, they must fail. COSCO nevertheless responds to SDSAP's erroneous arguments.

A. The TPC Sufficiently Alleges Wrongful Conduct by SDSAP.

SDSAP asserts that the allegation in the TPC that SDSAP signed two of the service contracts is “the only COSCO allegation in which SDSAP is named individually.” Mot. at 4 (emphasis in original). Although that statement is untrue (see, e.g., TPC ¶¶ 3, 5, 54), it is also irrelevant. As specifically stated in the TPC, “Third-Party Respondents” or “Samsung” means the three entities named Respondents in the TPC, specifically including SDSAP. TPC ¶ 5. And any reference to the Contract Signatories includes SDSAP and Logitech. Id. Accordingly, any allegation in the TPC to Samsung, Third-Party Respondents, or Contract Signatories necessarily applies specifically to SDSAP, just as if it said SDSAP and Logitech and SEC. By COSCO's count, that totals approximately forty (40) additional references applicable to SDSAP.¹²

Similarly, SDSAP asserts that there is no allegation that SDSAP participated in the negotiation of the Service Contracts it signed. Mot. at 4. That assertion appears frivolous, as SDSAP is identified as “Shipper” in the Service Contracts, which it necessarily agreed to have filed with the Commission and by which both it and COSCO entered into a transportation arrangement not otherwise permissible under the Shipping Act. Demonstrating assent by signing is of course part of the negotiations. And SDSAP thus had a clear opportunity to tell COSCO that it disputed the very contracts it was signing.¹³

¹² If SDS had a real concern, the appropriate remedy would have been a Motion for a More Definite Statement, as specifically authorized by 46 C.F.R. § 502.67. Further, the TPC alleges that SDS, SEC, and Logitech acted together, as well as with SEA, and so are joint and several violators of the Shipping Act, meaning the actions of one are equally the actions of the others. Because the Samsung entities have themselves obscured which entity took which actions, it is not appropriate at this stage to require COSCO to be more specific.

¹³ If SDS asserts that it did not agree to the Service Contracts, then they are both invalid and all shipments thereunder must be re-rated to the applicable tariff rates. 64 Fed. Reg. 11186, 11198

A quick review of the Third-Party Complaint also reveals that SDSAP's assertion is wrong. In paragraph 45 of the TPC, COSCO alleges that the Third-Party Respondents, including SDSAP, were involved in the negotiations. Likewise, in paragraph 65, COSCO alleges that the Third-Party Respondents, again including SDSAP, participated in negotiating the contracts. Certainly, the existing allegations are sufficient to warrant discovery, which will reveal more information about which Samsung entity did what.

SDSAP also incorrectly asserts that no facts are alleged about SDSAP's state of mind. Although that assertion is untrue (as shown below), even under the heightened pleading standard which SDSAP incorrectly seeks to apply, "... intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind may be alleged generally." Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).). COSCO has sufficiently alleged SDS's state of mind here. Furthermore, the only state of mind that matters to a claim under 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a) is that the conduct be knowing and willful. That is sufficiently alleged, including with factual support, in the TPC, as previously discussed.

Defying credibility, SDSAP states: "Nor are there any allegations that SDSAP declined to make any payments to COSCO or demanded any refunds or refused to provide information." Mot. at 4-5. COSCO plainly did allege that SDSAP declined to pay COSCO and sought refunds to which it was not entitled. See, e.g., TPC ¶ 65 ("Third-Party Respondents [including by definition SDSAP] have, with their agents, affiliates, and consignees named above, violated 46 U.S.C. § 41102(a)(1) by: refusing to pay and/or demanding refund of charges for which they were responsible under the Service Contracts"). And SEA was acting as an agent of SDSAP; as the "Shipper" to the Service Contracts, SDSAP was fully responsible for compliance with the Service Contracts and FMC requirements, even if its affiliates took the relevant actions.

B. SDSAP's Argument Regarding Breach of Contract Is Irrelevant.

SDSAP also asserts that “[a] claim for breach of contract does not establish an intent not to perform the contract.” Mot. at 12. Even if that proposition were true, it is irrelevant because it mischaracterizes COSCO’s claim. Although COSCO reserves its right to bring a breach of contract claim in court or by arbitration in Hong Kong as provided by the Service Contracts, that is not at issue here.¹⁴ The Commission has repeatedly held that the same nucleus of facts may give rise to both breach of contract claims to be heard in court and Shipping Act violations within the Commission’s jurisdiction, and the FMC is duty-bound, to hear cases where a Shipping Act violation is alleged even if the dispute might also be heard in court.¹⁵

C. COSCO Alleges “Knowing and Willful” Conduct by SDSAP.

SDSAP repeats its canard that the TPC has only one allegation about SDSAP – that it signed the contract. See Mot. at 4. But each reference to the “Third-Party Respondents” by definition includes SDSAP and SEC and Logitech. And as specifically relevant to the knowing and willful element, the TPC specifically alleges willful and knowing misconduct by SDSAP and

¹⁵ As Chief ALJ Wirth has explained: “The Commission has an obligation to determine whether an entity has violated the Shipping Act, even when the facts alleged may give rise to both breach of contract claims and Shipping Act claims.” MCS Industries, Inc. v. Cosco Shipping Lines Co., Ltd., Dkt. 21-05, 2023 WL 9604492, at *13 (Initial Decision, January 13, 2023) (quoting Anchor Shipping Co., 30 S.R.R. at 998).

SEC and Logitech. TPC ¶ 54. See also, e.g., TPC ¶¶ 53-61 (providing details). These allegations must be taken as true.

D. The TPC Alleges False or Fraudulent Conduct by SDSAP that benefited SDSAP and the Other Samsung Entities.

In yet another variation of its theme, SDSAP asserts that COSCO does not allege false or fraudulent conduct by SDSAP. Section 41102(a), however, extends beyond false or fraudulent conduct. The Section requires only “some element of falsification, deception, fraud, or concealment.” Unpaid Freight Charges, 26 S.R.R. 735, 737 (FMC 1993) (emphasis added) (quoting from Pacific Far East Lines – Alleged Rebates, 11 F.M.C. 357, 364 (FMC 1968), aff’d 410 F.2d 237 (D.C. Cir. 1969)). The TPC meets that requirement as to the Third-Party Respondents, including SDSAP. See, e.g., TPC ¶¶ 59, 66. The gravamen of this quibble by SDSAP is that the TPC does not include specific details, but COSCO need not provide more detailed allegations under the facial plausibility pleading standard.

Even more oddly, SDSAP claims that it obtained no benefit from its concealment. Yet, it is undeniable that SDSAP received and signed a contract that gave it favorable rates, terms, and conditions, which COSCO would not have granted absent the concealment. According to COSCO’s estimate, SDSAP and the other Samsung entities received about $36 million in ill-gotten benefits, including shipping at more than $32 million below the legally applicable charges. TPC ¶¶ 70-71. As the “Shipper” to the Service Contracts, those benefits accrued to SDSAP, even if SDSAP assigned some aspects to its agent SEA.¹⁶

¹⁶ SDS’s assertion that SEA has not received the “benefit” of its concealment because “SEA paid the detention and demurrage charges” (Mot. at 18-19) not only ignores the ill-gotten reduced shipping charges it and its cohorts received, but is based on an incorrect factual premise: SEA has paid only a portion (and seeks a refund of what it has paid) of the detention and demurrage charges to which COSCO is entitled, and has refused to pay COSCO at least $4 million in lawful detention charges. TPC ¶¶ 51, 72.

IV. COSCO IS ENTITLED, IF NECESSARY, TO AMEND THE TPC.

Even if the allegations of the Third-Party Complaint were somehow found deficient, it would be necessary for the Presiding Officer to allow COSCO an opportunity to amend its TPC, just as SEA was allowed to amend its defective Complaint. As the Commission has explained:

Although the ALJ may in [their] discretion dismiss a [pleading] without leave to amend, the Commission typically allows liberally.... This approach is similar to that taken by federal courts, which usually allow leave to replead after granting a motion to dismiss.... Generally, where a more carefully drafted complaint might state a claim, a plaintiff must be provided with at least one opportunity to amend before the court dismissed with prejudice.... The standards for dismissing a complaint with prejudice is high.

Maier Terminals, LLC v. PANYNJ, No. 1202, 2015 WL 9426189 at *39 (FMC 2015) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

In Maier, the Commission upheld the dismissal with prejudice of some claims, while reversing the dismissal of others, saying:

The ALJ's conclusion that amendment would be futile, however, is unsupported. The ALJ did not explain why it would be futile for Maier to amend its complaint nor find that the allegation of other facts consistent with the challenged proceeding could not possibly cure the deficiency. There is no reason to believe that, if granted leave to amend, Maier could not cure some of the complaint's deficiencies.

Id. at *40 (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Here, COSCO could easily cure or supplement any deficiency that the Presiding Officer might identify, although COSCO reasonably believes there are none. If the Presiding Officer concludes that some of the allegations are not sufficiently clear or complete, COSCO should be given the opportunity to amend.¹⁷ This is amply reaffirmed by the FMC's very recent decision in

¹⁷ The Commission's Administrative Law Judges have liberally allowed leave to amend pleadings. See, e.g., D.F. Young, Inc. v. Wallenius Wilhelmsen Logistics, Dkt. No. 23-14, 2024 WL 402469 at *2 (ALJ Order Granting Leave to Amend Complaint, January 23, 2024); CCMA LLC v. Maersk A/S, Dkt. No. 22-01, 2022 WL 458571 *2 (ALJ Order Granting Motion to Amend Complaint, February 7, 2022); MCS Industries, Inc. v. COSCO Shipping Lines Co., Ltd., Dkt. No. 21-05, 2022 WL 458569 at *2 (ALJ Order on Motion to Amend Complaint, February 4, 2022); Simple

SEA v. OOCL, in which the Presiding Officer properly dismissed the complaint as filed but erred in not permitting OOCL an opportunity to amend.

V. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the SDSAP Motion should be denied and the dispute between COSCO and SDSAP should proceed to discovery.
