Docket No 00-04

HON NORMAN D KLINE

ANSWER TO COUNTER-COMPLAINT

Complainant/Counter-Respondent AL KOGAN d/b/a GALAWAY

INTERNATIONAL ("Al Kogan"), by and through its attorney Jonathan Clark Green,

P C , hereby submits to the Commission the following answers to the allegations contained in the counter-complaint filed in this matter on April 13, 2000, by

Respondent/Counter-Complainant W E S T Forwarding Services ("WEST")

I. Al Kogan admits that WEST is an Illinois Corporation with its principal place of business at 729 Route 83, Suite 307, Bensenville, Illinois, 60106, U S A., that WEST is in the business of providing freight forwarding services, and that it is registered with the Federal Maritime Commission as FMC Lic. #3 118-R. Al Kogan avers that WEST is also in the business of providing NVOCC services. Al Kogan denies the remaining allegations contained in paragraph I of WEST's counter-complaint, for they call for a legal conclusion.

II. Al Kogan admits that Galaway International is presently an Illinois corporation, and avers that it was incorporated as such in August of 1998. Al Kogan further admits that he was doing business as Galaway International prior to that incorporation, and that both his sole proprietorship at that time and the subsequent corporation were and are, respectfully, engaged in the export business. Al Kogan denies the remaining allegations contained in paragraph II of WEST's counter-claim.

III. Al Kogan admits the allegations contained in paragraph III of WEST's counter-complaint to the extent that WEST acted as Al Kogan's freight forwarder for the shipment of 2359 cases of auto care products, originally destined for Moscow, Russia, via Kotka, Finland. Al Kogan avers that the Federal Maritime Commission also has jurisdiction over this dispute, pursuant to 46 U.S.C. Section 1701, et seq., to the extent that WEST acted as a common carrier over water and otherwise as a person involved in the foreign and domestic offshore commerce of the U.S. as delineated in 46 CFR Sec 501.2. Al Kogan denies the remaining allegations contained in paragraph III of WEST's counter-complaint.

IV

A. Al Kogan admits that he hired WEST in early 1998 to arrange for various shipments to countries located in the Commonwealth of Independent States. Al Kogan further admits that, in late January, early February 1998, he hired WEST to arrange for a shipment of auto care products from Treatment Products, Ltd., in Chicago, through Kotka, Finland, to Moscow, Russia. Al Kogan avers that WEST specifically agreed and understood that the shipment had to go through Kotka, Finland, in order for the customer to accept the goods. Al Kogan further avers that all documentation and control for the shipment was in the hands of WEST from that point forward. Al Kogan denies the remaining allegations contained in paragraph IV (A) of WEST's counter-complaint.

B Al Kogan absolutely denies the allegations contained in the first sentence of paragraph IV (B) of WEST's counter-complaint. Al Kogan avers that he gave no instructions whatsoever to WEST concerning intermediaries, if any, that WEST was going to use in this shipment. Al Kogan further avers that he never heard of Atlantic Ocean Lines ("AOL") until WEST mentioned the name to him after they contacted him in late March, early April, of 1998 in order to inform him that a mistake had been made and the shipment was on its way to Haifa, Israel. Al Kogan admits that when he hired WEST to arrange for this shipment, the one instruction that he did give to WEST was that the shipment had to go through Kotka, Finland, for the customer to accept the goods, and that WEST agreed to those arrangements. Al Kogan denies the remaining allegations contained in paragraph IV (B) of WEST's counter-complaint.

C Al Kogan denies the allegations contained in paragraph IV (C) of WEST's counter-complaint. Al Kogan avers that the only signed original bill of lading from AOL that has been produced by WEST has been one issued by AOL on March 9, 1998, showing that the shipment had been directed through Odessa (and Haifa, Israel) to Moscow, and not through Kotka, Finland. See page one of Group Exhibit A, attached hereto. Al Kogan is without the knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of WEST's allegation concerning who created any of the additional, unsigned bills of lading contained in Group Exhibit A, attached hereto. Al Kogan is continuing his investigation. Al Kogan denies the remaining allegations contained in paragraph IV (C) of WEST's counter-complaint.

D Based on information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in paragraph IV (D) of WEST's counter-complaint, Al Kogan denies those allegations

E Based on information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in paragraph IV (E) of WEST's counter-complaint, Al Kogan denies those allegations

F Based on information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in paragraph IV (F) of WEST's counter-complaint, Al Kogan denies those allegations. Al Kogan avers that Jean DeKeyser of WEST only discovered that his company had made a mistake when he returned to Chicago from his condominium in Miami in late March of 1998 and noticed that ZIM lines was listed as the shipping line for Al Kogan's shipment through Kotka, Finland, which did not make sense, for shipments to Kotka from North America must go through England or Hamburg, and ZIM, the Israeli state shipping line, does not call to such ports from North America. Only after investigating the matter at that time and discovering the mistake did WEST contact Al Kogan and inform him that a mistake had been made with his shipment. Prior to that time, it was business as usual at WEST, and they issued the invoice on the shipment on March 16, 1998, and issued a check on March 18, 1998, to AOL for the freight charges, without question. See Group Exhibit C, attached hereto

G Al Kogan admits the allegations contained in paragraph IV (G) of WEST's counter-complaint, averring that WEST learned of such a fact only after it investigated the matter as described in paragraph IV (F), above

H. Al Kogan denies the allegations contained in paragraph IV (H) of WEST's counter-complaint. Al Kogan avers that Jean DeKeyser made specific representations to him and Jeff Victor of Treatment Products, Ltd., at this time that are spelled out in paragraph F of Al Kogan's complaint in this matter

I. Based on information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in paragraph IV (I) of WEST's counter-complaint, Al Kogan denies the those allegations, except that, as to whether WEST forwarded the "self-serving" letters they claimed to have written to AOL, Al Kogan is without knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of those particular allegations. Al Kogan avers that WEST had a continuing dispute with AOL (and possibly ZIM) concerning certain payments that were due to be made by WEST to them, and WEST refused to pay those amounts, thereby delaying the shipment even further

J. Based on information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in paragraph IV (J) of WEST's counter-complaint, Al Kogan admits that Jean DeKeyser contacted Mr. Joseph Farrell of the Federal Maritime Commission and forwarded him the "self-serving" letter contained in WEST's exhibit 4 of its counter-complaint. Al Kogan also admits that WEST apparently engaged certain attorneys in its efforts to correct its earlier mistake. Al Kogan denies the remaining allegations contained in paragraph IV (J) of WEST's counter-complaint.

K. Al Kogan denies the allegations contained in paragraph IV (K) of WEST's counter-complaint, averring only that the container did eventually make it to Kotka, although not in the manner originally represented by WEST to Al Kogan, and not in time for Al Kogan's customer to accept the goods, despite earlier assurances by WEST

L Al Kogan is without the knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of WEST's allegations contained in paragraph IV (L) of WEST's counter-complaint. Al Kogan's investigation is continuing.

M. Al Kogan is without the knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of WEST's allegations contained in the first sentence of paragraph IV (M) of WEST's counter-complaint. Al Kogan's investigation is continuing. Al Kogan vehemently denies the remaining allegations contained in paragraph IV (M) of WEST's counter-complaint. Al Kogan avers that, despite his repeated requests to obtain the bills of lading in order to release the container immediately and try to salvage what he could of his shipment, WEST adamantly refused, instead demanding that Al Kogan pay WEST over $13,000.00 before they would allow the container to be released. Al Kogan further avers that he had no control over the container in Kotka, with WEST holding the container "hostage" until August of 1998, when WEST agreed to send the bill of lading to Al Kogan to release the container in exchange for a $6,340 payment to be made to its agent in Moscow, according to specific arrangements made by WEST

N Al Kogan denies the allegations contained in paragraph IV (N) of WEST's counter-complaint. Al Kogan avers that all except one other shipment he made through WEST had been arranged prior to this problem being discovered in late March, early April of 1998 Al Kogan further avers that he arranged for that one other shipment through WEST after that time due to WEST's continuous holding of his container "hostage" in Kotka, and his feeling that he needed to keep some sort of relationship going with WEST to protect his interests, otherwise, only quotes were obtained from WEST during this period.

O Al Kogan admits that he contacted WEST on or about August 1998 to inform them that he had found an alternative customer for the container, and again requested that WEST turn over the bill of lading so that the container could be released in Kotka. Al Kogan avers that Faith Krzeminski of WEST, to the later strong disapproval of Jean DeKeyser, made arrangements for the release and subsequent shipping of the container to the new destination of Chelyabinsk, Russia, in exchange for a payment of $6,340 to WEST's agent in Moscow. Al Kogan further avers that only after such arrangements were made and confirmed by WEST did Faith Krzeminski agree to provide Al Kogan with the name, address and telephone number of WEST's agent in Moscow for use by his alternate customer, and to turn over the bill of lading to Al Kogan, who, upon receipt, quickly fedexed the bill of lading with the other information to his new alternative customer in Chelyabinsk, who then made the payment directly to the agent in Moscow, as WEST had arranged. Al Kogan denies the remaining allegations contained in paragraph IV (O) of WEST's counter-complaint, except that Al Kogan admits that WEST later went back on its word that it would take care of all legal proceedings involved in this matter and insisted, instead, that Al Kogan initiate such proceedings, despite Al Kogan having no knowledge or documentation as to what had transpired, or any knowledge of who Atlantic Ocean Lines was.

P Al Kogan admits that WEST has charged, and continues to attempt to collect, over $13,000 from him allegedly in relation to this shipment, despite the fact (i) that Al Kogan has already paid over $900 over the original price for this shipment, (ii) that Al Kogan has absolutely no responsibility to pay such amounts, and (iii) that Al Kogan is, in fact, the victim of WEST's own mistake, which has caused him extreme damage, far, far beyond the $13,000 amount, as outlined in Al Kogan's complaint in this matter. Al Kogan avers that he fully entrusted WEST with all the arrangements for his shipment, and that WEST, after discovering its own mistake, even refused to give Al Kogan its normal insurance coverage as it promised, instead opting for an unusual second rate coverage under the circumstances. Al Kogan denies the remaining allegations contained in paragraph IV (P) of WEST's counter-complaint.

V Al Kogan denies all the allegations contained in paragraph V of WEST's counter-complaint, and avers that he was completely, and always, dissatisfied with WEST's performance in this matter, and that he has continued to refuse any further payments to WEST in this matter based on the allegations outlined in his complaint. Al Kogan further avers, and objects to the fact, that WEST has fashioned a number of its allegations in this counter-complaint, as well as its answer to Al Kogan's complaint, in the form of a motion for summary judgment, providing alleged documentation that goes well beyond that which is necessary at this stage in the proceedings before the Commission. In fact, most, if not all, of the documentation in this case was controlled and retained by WEST until, after some delay, Al Kogan was only recently able to obtain some of it by way of discovery in the related state court case. Without waiving the objection stated above, Al Kogan provides to the Commission, for its review, the no less than four different bills of lading produced by WEST in the state court case in this matter (see Group Exhibit A, attached hereto), the only signed original one of which is the Chicago-New York-Odessa-Moscow bill of lading originally issued by AOL in this matter. There were also at least two different certificates of origin issued by WEST in this matter, with questionable dating (see Group Exhibit B, attached hereto). Further materials are contained in Group Exhibit C, showing WEST's unquestioned payment to AOL on March 18, 1998, as well as WEST's margins in this matter on the original invoice

VI Al Kogan denies the allegations contained in paragraph VI of WEST's counter-complaint.

VII. WEST's counter-complaint's Prayer for Relief Al Kogan denies that W E S T Forwarding is entitled to any requested relief, including equitable, injunctive, or declaratory relief. Al Kogan further denies that W E S T Forwarding is entitled to any judgment, interest, costs, penalties or attorneys' fees, under its counter-complaint. Al Kogan further vehemently denies that he violated, in any way, any laws of the United States of America in this matter He seeks only justice before this Commission. Al Kogan further avers that he wishes to renew his request, if the Commission deems it appropriate, to have the hearing in this matter take place in Chicago, Illinois, the location of not only both parties in this matter, but also a large number of the witnesses involved, who would likely be unable to attend a hearing in Washington, D C , due to cost. In addition, unlike in Washington, D C , both law firms representing the parties in this matter have offices in Chicago
