Subject: Docket No. 20-15, Comments on PVO Financial Responsibility Rulemaking.
Date: Sunday, September 12, 2021 7:06:15 AM

As a Travel Advisor for over 40 years, I have seen many changes in our industry. But I have never seen anything like the issues caused by Covid-19. I fully understand the issues cruise lines and their holding companies had dealing with unprecedented refund requests. Companies generally do not keep millions in cash just sitting around waiting to be used. However, this situation has pointed out a flaw in the system. There are still agencies and, I suspect passengers, who are still waiting for commissions or refunds. While you are legislating for passenger refunds, please also include verbiage regarding paying agent commissions. Clarity regarding the individual holding companies/cruise lines refund abilities would also be helpful when dealing with our clients/their passengers.

If you require further insight into this situation, feel free to contact me. We are thankful for your intervention and look forward to substantial changes.

Regards,

Janet B. Krebs

Please be aware that COVID remains a top issue for travelers to domestic & international destinations and that frequent testing may be required for your trip - - both for entry into your intended destination as well as for the return to the US. This is a reminder that despite precautions, you could still test positive at any time and will then be subject to your locale's quarantine and contact tracing protocols. If you test positive while outside of the US, you will be subject to local quarantine restrictions and timelines for returning home – at your own expense. Belle Meade Vacations is not responsible for any COVID related issue that you may encounter before, during or after your travel dates.
